

TO THE PROBLEM OF THE ROLE OF THE MORAL AND MENTAL RESILIENCE OF THE WARRIOR

Dimitar Dimitrov

Abstract: The article attempts to present some features that determine the place and role of the moral and mental resilience of military personnel in the context of modern military operations. The problem under consideration is illuminated by the position of the necessity for their emergence, development and actual composition of the characteristics that make up the modern appearance of the personal presence of people in the army. An attempt was also made to present the contemporary components and dimensions of the moral and mental resilience of war through the prism of Bulgaria's membership in NATO, as a result of the permanent need for more effective interaction at the individual and organizational level. The analysis of the elements that shape the personal presence of servicemen is based on the seven-component structure of army values, battle spirit, morale, and discipline.

Key words: moral and mental resilience, personality presence, army values, battle spirit, morale, and discipline.
